

Welcome to Bumbu Bali Restaurant & Cooking School

Dining out in Bali is not a social custom; therefore, unless the visitor is invited into a Balinese home, or sample festive favorites during a ceremony, he or she is not likely to experience real Balinese food. We are proud to welcome you to our home where we offer all the culinary secrets our Island of Gods has to offer. The basic mix of spices used in all Balinese dishes is called BUMBU, after which we named our cafe.

Nasi Campur - A Taste of Bali

In a sense that is what Balinese people eat at home twice every day throughout their lives. But the term is usually restricted to dishes that one buys at a Warung. Most Balinese Warungs that serve Rice have a glass enclosed case in which are placed bowls of various pre-cooked dishes. There is almost always fried chicken and usually some sort of meat, vegetables and sauces. Usually there is fried Tempe (fermented soy bean cakes). Fried peanuts are standard. You can just order Nasi and the person in charge usually a woman, puts a scoop of cooked rice from out of a big basket on a plate, and then adds small portions of contents of each bowl, plus a dab of Sambel. (spicy chili sauce). You can specify that certain ingredients be omitted. You may not be served with the meal. There is always an assortment of snacks in the Warung, but these cost extra. Some of the most famous Warung Nasi are crowded with people during mid-day.

Warung serving Nasi also do a driving business in Nasi Bungkus, which just means Nasi Campur done up in a package, to be eaten else where. The package is almost invariable a banana leaf, or more commonly, two banana leaves layered, and folded into a kind of conical container. The proprietor puts the same ingredients in the cone as she would but onto the plate, folds over the tops of the banana leaves, and skewers the tops together with a sliver of bamboo. Groups going on picnics or to some far away temple for worship often take along huge baskets full of Nasi Bungkus for consumption after prayers.
